CHRISTMAS COME.

CHURCH-SERVICES TO-DAY. Observances of the Pestival in the Cuthelic and Episcopal Churches-Other Items on

It is rather superfluous to remark that Christmas is here, for those-not hopelessly deal—who have forgotten the fact will before they open this paper be reminded of it by the booming of boys' cannons, the discharge of pistols and shot-guns, the noise of fire-crackers, and of those more acute diabolisms-the juvenile dram and tin horn. So Christmas morn breaks upon the man tympanum. Seeing it is preferable to hearing it, for around nearly every hearthstone in this land where there are children by "the crack of day an excited and delighted knot will be gathered. They will not wait to dress, they will not wait for their mothers to dress, so eager will they be to peer into the stockings which they last night hung by the chimney-piece, and which have but to be opened to disclose to them a world of delight. The letters they have written Santa Claus have been answered ; the things they wished for have come, and for a few hours at least the dearest wishes of their hearts are satisfied, while on memory's tablets prints are made which will survive the rudest shocks of life, and be fresh and bright when the little child of to-day sees his grandchildren living over the same life and getting the same expe-
